Credit Building Workshop – Springfield (online and in-person) @ Library Station from 9 am – 2 pm. Register for your free ticket today because achieving your financial goals is dependent on having a strong credit profile and high credit score. Achieving your small business focused goals is often dependent on having a strong personal credit profile and credit score. Small business owners are often led to believe that their business credit matters more than their personal credit to obtain financing, however, as many have learned, that is not the actual reality. As small business owners work to obtain financing, they are often presented with the reality that their personal credit score plays a much more significant role than their business credit. In fact, in the beginning and first growth stages, lenders are truly usually only looking at personal credit scores! This interactive credit as an asset workshop is designed to help you learn more about building and improving your personal credit profile so that you can achieve your business financial goals. Make Music Springfield MO @ The Acoustic Shoppe from 10 am. Join us for Make Music Day performances at The Acoustic Shoppe and across Springfield! Make Music Day is a global celebration of music that originated 41 years ago in France. Conceived by Jack Lang and the Ministry of Culture, this unique holiday envisions a day filled with free music performances across cities, from street corners to parks, rooftops, and beyond. Unlike traditional music festivals, Make Music Day invites everyone to participate, whether they're musicians performing or hosts providing spaces for music. The event takes place on the summer solstice, June 21, and is known as Fête De La Musique, which translates to both "festival of music" and "make music" in French. Over the years, it has become a national holiday in France, with millions of people playing instruments or singing in public and millions more attending performances. The concept crossed the Atlantic 15 years ago with Make Music New York, a grassroots initiative that quickly gained popularity. Today, Make Music Day is celebrated in over 1,000 cities across 120 countries, including over 100 U.S. cities. It has become a platform for musicians of all backgrounds to share their talents and connect with their communities. In cities like Springfield, Make Music Day is facilitated by local organizations and volunteers who organize free concerts and events in public spaces. These celebrations aim to unite communities, promote artistic expression, and create memorable experiences for participants and audiences alike. How it Works: Musicians, singers, and venues across Springfield can connect through our dedicated matchmaking platform. By signing up, performers can request slots at various locations, while venues can seek out performers. This platform facilitates seamless communication and coordination for all involved!
